Join us to learn about:

- How native mature trees can help us adapt to and mitigate climate change in our city
- Why we're losing trees at such a high rate
- What we can do about it

The Emerald City has as many trees as people who love them, so why are we razing Seattle's native urban forest? Seattle lost over 1,705 trees between January and October of 2023, with more coming down soon.
